Event advertising and sponsorship

The APS hosts a number of psychology conferences and events each year. If you have a niche target market you want to reach and connect with, consider our conferences and events for advertising, sponsorship and exhibition opportunities.

Conference handbook advertising

The conference handbook is the official publication that all delegates, speakers and guests receive upon registration at the conference. The conference handbook is distributed inside the conference satchel, and contains the full program, keynote presenters biographies, maps and social events, and a list of sponsors and exhibitors.

Conference satchel insert

One item of promotional literature will be included in the conference delegate satchel, which delegates collect upon registration at the conference venue.

Satchel insert size options include: A4, A5 or DL flyer (colour, double-sided print).

TIP: Think outside the box. We find delegates respond to satchel items which they can re-use again (example USBs, magnets, bookmarks).

Conference sponsorship and exhibition

APS Conferences are an excellent opportunity for your business to showcase products and services direct to your target market; and a chance to meet face-to-face with the people who buy and recommend the products and services you deliver.

Benefits of sponsoring/exhibiting include:

• Build face-to-face customer relationships
• Provide interactive demonstrations of your products and/or services
• Network with key industry decision-makers
• Conduct market research with your target audiences
• Develop and build relationships with new and existing customers and stakeholders
• Identify new business opportunities with customers
• Increase brand awareness
• Establish new partnerships
• Receive wide acknowledgement of your involvement, commitment and support of the conference

APS advertising guidelines

The APS operates within the ethical and regulatory requirements for practising psychologists, regulated health services, and education and training facilities in Australia.

All advertising in APS publications and platforms (including event advertising) must comply with the APS Code of Ethics and any relevant requirements stipulated by the Psychology Board of Australia (PsyBA) or the Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency (AHPRA), regardless of whether or not the external advertiser/sponsor is a registered psychologist, or is providing a regulated health service or an education and training program.

Assessment of promotional material

Your promotional material will be assessed for approval according to the APS advertising guidelines. Approval is at the discretion of the authorised APS officer. The APS reserves the right to edit advertisement content for style and professional language.

The promotional material must NOT contain:

- The word ‘specialist’ (or words to that effect, such as ‘specialises in’) used in relation to describing a psychologist.
- Claims that cannot be substantiated by a body of reputable research.
- Inaccurate or misleading representation of a product/service or an individual’s details or qualifications.
- Claims implying superiority of a psychologist over other psychologists.
- Claims that could induce fears in clients if they did not obtain a particular service, product or publication.
- Information or images that are vulgar, sensational, in poor taste or that will reflect poorly on the APS or the profession of psychology.
- Sweeping statements that are not able to be substantiated (e.g., ‘the best in the world’).

• The use of testimonials in advertising of regulated health services, as per the guidelines for advertising regulated health services developed by the National Boards and published by the Australian Health Practitioner Regulation Agency (AHPRA). Testimonials, defined as personal statements or recommendations from someone who has received the service or used the product. It does not prohibit the use of testimonials (or reviews and recommendations) when advertising education and/or training workshops that may or may not be provided by a registered health practitioner.

• Wording that in any way implies accreditation for continuing professional development hours for psychologists (acceptable example: ‘This event represents x CPD hours’).

• Information that may breach the rights of any person and/or breach any law, including without limitation the Human Rights and Equal Opportunity Commission Act 1986 (Cth) and any other anti-discrimination legislation applicable in the State(s) in which the advertisers conduct business. Where an exemption has been granted, the exemption number must be included in the advertisement submitted to the APS.

• The APS does not feature advertisements for unpaid work – including in relation to internships, work experience and student placements.

Regulatory environment

Advertisers undertake that all information they provide to the APS is accurate and does not breach the rights of any person and does not breach any law.

Advertisers must adhere to the principles of truth in advertising as set out in the Risk and Control Self-Assessments (RCSA) Code of Practice. The APS reserves the right to cancel or reject advertisements that do not comply with the APS Advertising Policy, APS Code of Ethics or other regulatory, quality or legal requirements.
